

QuestaWeb Becomes Microsoft Certified Partner

Membership in the Microsoft Certified Partner Program provides QuestaWeb with additional resources to develop and deploy Internet-based import export software solutions to corporations trading globally.

Westfield, New Jersey, U.S. – April 13, 2004 – QuestaWeb, Inc., a provider of integrated import and export management software solutions, today announced it is a new member in the Microsoft Certified Partner Program. QuestaWeb has been named as a Microsoft Certified Partner for Software Products, due to its knowledge and abilities to integrate Microsoft technologies and its proven track record of developing robust and reliable software applications.

“QuestaWeb is extremely pleased with our new status as a Microsoft Certified Partner for Software Products,” stated Vlad Yakovlev, Director of Product Development at QuestaWeb. “We believe that our partnership with Microsoft adds value to our existing capabilities; including our initiatives in deployment of the latest web-native technologies. Our membership will allow us to continue to enhance our global trade and logistics management solutions.”

“Being a member of the program allows us to clearly promote ourselves to customers as having proven expertise in providing high-quality software,” said Yuri Petridi, MIS Architect at QuestaWeb. “We are deeply engaged in redefining the technology, features and functions of our applications to create a state-of-the-art solution that is unparalleled by other commercial applications or in-house systems available in this market space.”

The Microsoft Certified Partner Program allows customers to trust and utilize solutions based on advanced and tested technologies. QuestaWeb's commitment for the latest knowledge and expertise is critical when delivering integrated technologies. Certified

Partners need to meet a higher set of criteria for each category, including enhanced certification and a portfolio of real-world customer experience and are identified as the most skilled partners in specific solution areas.
